One bullet took effect in the right side of Green's neck and passed into his left lung.

Coburn was later arrested. The street was full of people and a panic was averted with difficulty. The stray shots luckily struck a building and tele-

ON THEIR WAY HOME.

Indiana Editors Have Been to the Head of Kentucky Navigation.

Staff Correspondence of the Journal. FRANKFORT, Ky., May 13.-The members of the Southern Indiana Press Association paid another visit to Frankfort to-night on their way home from the excursion to the headwaters of the Kentucky river. The boat reached Valley View, 160 miles from the mouth of the river, at 6 o'clock this morning. That is as far as the government locks will allow the passage up the river at this time. On the return trip the boat reached Frankfort at 7:30 o'clock. The boat was expected several hours earlier, and the belated arrival was a keen disappointment to the Frankfort people, as well as to the editors. A Frankfort committee had planned to give the Indiana party a carriage ride, and it was especially expected to visit the cemetery here, which is said to be a most beautiful spot. The late arrival, however, made it necessary to abandon the ride. A committee headed by J. B. Dryden, editor of the Daily Call, met the visitors and the party was invited up town. The women of the party accompanied the men and a pleasant informal reception was held at the Eiks' Club. Afterward a visit was made to the State Prison.

The editors held their meeting on board the boat to-day and heard some entertaining papers read. Officers will not be elected at the meeting. The members of the executive committee of the Indiana Republican Editorial Association arranged to-day for the Republican editors to hold their annual outing this year about the middle of July. The trip will be made on the lakes, and will begin at Chicago and end at Put-in Bay.
